Introduction

Dear Mr Boris Johnson,

I am writing to discuss climate change and how important it is to stop global warming. My reasons are simple and important for the survival of the planet. In this letter, I will be discussing the effects of climate change like the melting ice caps or server flooding happening across the United Kingdom. In my opinion, this is the most important thing we need to talk about because over the last five years it has been the hottest on record.

Firstly, the planet is warming up. This is important to highlight because of its effect on animals. For example, polar bears and penguins are losing their homes because of the increasing temperatures causing the ice to melt and the sea levels to rise. If temperatures continue to increase many animals may become extinct like polar bears. Do you want to be the reason a species disappears? You can act now to stop the devastation of climate change and global warming.

Secondly, climate change can cause more draughts and storms to happen meaning that crops that need rain could half. This means that there could be a food shortage because crops are not producing enough for everyone around the world.

I know some people do not believe in climate change but, I know how important it is to act now. For example, with storms getting worse from climate change, there are more houses getting flooded. My house flooded last year from a serious storm. I have pots and pans all around my house collecting the sprouting water.

Conclusion

In conclusion, it is not too late to act and with your help we can stop animals becoming extinct and sea levels rising.

Yours sincerely,
